

This is “Dedications”, article 3 from the book Creating Literary Analysis \(index.html\) (v. 1.0).

This book is licensed under a Creative Commons by-nc-sa 3.0 (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/>) license. See the license for more details, but that basically means you can share this book as long as you credit the author (but see below), don't make money from it, and do make it available to everyone else under the same terms.

This content was accessible as of December 29, 2012, and it was downloaded then by Andy Schmitz (<http://lardbucket.org>) in an effort to preserve the availability of this book.

Normally, the author and publisher would be credited here. However, the publisher has asked for the customary Creative Commons attribution to the original publisher, authors, title, and book URI to be removed. Additionally, per the publisher's request, their name has been removed in some passages. More information is available on this project's attribution page (http://2012books.lardbucket.org/attribution.html?utm_source=header).

For more information on the source of this book, or why it is available for free, please see the project's home page (<http://2012books.lardbucket.org/>). You can browse or download additional books there.

Dedications

John Pennington

John Pennington would like to dedicate Writing about Literature through Theory to Karlyn Crowley and their daughter Ada Mae Crowley Pennington, who at the ripe old age of two will have the joy of encountering for the first time Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking-Glass. They are uncertain whether she will enjoy Writing about Literature through Theory as much.

Ryan Cordell

Ryan Cordell would like to dedicate Writing About Literature through Theory to Greg Colomb, who taught him everything he knows about teaching writing. Rest in peace, Greg.
