

This is “Acknowledgments”, article 2 from the book Individual Finance \(index.html\) (v. 1.0).

This book is licensed under a Creative Commons by-nc-sa 3.0 license. See the license for more details, but that basically means you can share this book as long as you credit the author (but see below), don't make money from it, and do make it available to everyone else under the same terms.

This content was accessible as of December 29, 2012, and it was downloaded then by Andy Schmitz (<http://lardbucket.org>) in an effort to preserve the availability of this book.

Normally, the author and publisher would be credited here. However, the publisher has asked for the customary Creative Commons attribution to the original publisher, authors, title, and book URI to be removed. Additionally, per the publisher's request, their name has been removed in some passages. More information is available on this project's attribution page.

For more information on the source of this book, or why it is available for free, please see the project's home page (<http://2012books.lardbucket.org/>). You can browse or download additional books there.

Acknowledgments

I am very grateful to Jeff Shelstad, Mary Ellen Lepionka, Shannon Gattens, and the staff at Unnamed Publisher. Friends and family have been more than patient throughout; their faith has been unfailing and their support has been vital. I am thankful for the inspiration of several great teachers, notably Stan Gartska, Stephen A. Ross, Jon Ingersoll, and Barbara Stanhope. Most of all, I have been fortunate to have been taught by hundreds of students, of all ages and stages, from whom I have learned so much.

—Rachel S. Siegel